Accelerating Human Capital Development

By 2022, Filipinos will have more opportunities to develop their full potential. They will have better access to health care services and opportunities to acquire 21st century skills and competencies. At the same time, they will have easier transition to the workforce. The specific targets for core indicators identified by the government are given in the full PDP 2017-2022 document, Tables 10.4 to 10.6.

Reducing Vulnerability of Individuals and Families

By the end of the planning period, Filipinos will have greater socioeconomic resiliency1. A universal and transformative social protection will be provided to all, to empower the people and make them capable of preventing, responding to, and recovering from various risks (i.e., economic, governance, and political risks, risks from natural hazards and individuals' inherent vulnerabilities2). Specific indicators to measure the success of reducing the vulnerabilities of Filipinos can be found in Table 11.5 of the full PDP 2017-2022 document.
